

July 17, 2008

For those of you who read this update on a regular basis, you'll know that the longer it takes me to put a list together, the longer the list of titles. That has never been more the case. It's been a busy time in Audio/Visual these past few months, so here we have all the purchases from the spring and early summer. There are far too many great records to highlight them all one by one, so watch the list for the bold titles to find some other new and interesting suggestions. There are a few albums, however, which bear special notice.

Dennis Wilson's beautiful solo record Pacific Ocean Blue is finally back in print, and it proves – once and for all – that he was never just the Beach Boys drummer; the “other Wilson.” Dennis was actually the first Beach Boy to record a solo record, and though it was originally released in 1977 with a sound that places it firmly in that decade, Dennis had been working on it for almost seven years. It sounds nothing like any of the Beach Boys records on which he played, but Dennis crafted a beautiful album filled with a personal awareness and honesty that is still a rarity in pop music.

Volume 1 by She & Him is an absolutely delightful record from singer/songwriter Zoey Deschanel, better known from her performances in such films as All the Real Girls, Elf, and Winter Passing. This is her first album, and while no one has called her an accomplished singer, she has one of those distinctive and charming voices that instantly claim your attention. All of her songs have a sort of retro feel to them, but that feel belongs to several different eras, all at once. Personally, I'm already looking forward to “volume 2.”

One really interesting and surprisingly controversial record – from a band no one has ever considered controversial – is Stone of Sisyphus by Chicago. This album was intended for release in 1994 but was shelved for a variety of reasons, mainly due to their label's conjecture that the album did not continue the ballad-heavy sound Chicago had made its fortunes with since the days of Chicago 16 and 17. This album hearkened back to their earlier, horn-based sound, so its release just last month is something of a victory for musical integrity, and proof that chart success has absolutely no bearing on the quality of the music.

Scarlett Johansson, best known as the star of Lost in Translation and Match Point among many other films, just released her first album called Anywhere I Lay My Head which is – amazingly – a collection of Tom Waits songs from albums as diverse as Raindogs and Alice. Johansson's voice is almost a perfect match for the earthy and guttural Waits melodies, and while this may prove to be a one-off project, as well as being far from a perfect record, it is a very dreamy and hypnotic collection of moods and hidden melodies that proves more than entertaining.

Some of the best music to be released in the last 10 years has come from two sources: Putumayo and The Rough Guide. These labels focus on what is still called “world music,” and I am happy to add about 25 amazing titles to the World section, including music from Madagascar, Morocco, Portugal, Haiti, Vietnam, Kenya, Malaysia, and many other countries where music is often more integral to its culture than it is here in the U.S. I still find it exciting to press play when I have no idea what kind of sounds I'll find streaming out of the speakers, and this is never more exciting than when you are dealing with the music of a different country. Most of these titles will bypass the “New” section, so make sure to browse World next time you visit the library.

While I could go on indefinitely (more true than you know), there have been many notable releases in the last few months that I don't have time to mention fully, including albums by Bon Iver, Basia Bulat, Coldplay, Neil Diamond, Jakob Dylan, Jeremy Fisher, Hiroshi, Jewel,

Alexi Murdoch, Esperanza Spalding, Martha Wainwright, and a really fun and bouncy live release by Willie Nelson and Wynton Marsalis called Two Men with the Blues that should be on everyone's must-hear-list. But before I leave you, I want to bring special attention to the classical collection which has recently been "refreshed," so to speak, which was long overdue. There are over 300 new CD's in the Orchestral, Orch-Coll, Vocal-Coll, Opera, and Instrument sections, which means we now own pieces we never owned before and, most importantly, performances of classic pieces we never owned before. The list for these titles is note very helpful for identification purposes, so it is not included here. Just be sure to browse through the sections I just mentioned to find some wonderful new music. The Panorama series by Deutsche Grammophon is particularly enjoyable as they are essentially a "greatest hits" kind of compilation for composers, but the content is excitingly varied and performed by a variety of ensembles and soloists. For those of you who are less likely to pick up a classical CD, grab one of the Panorama sets and give yourself a treat.

Well, that's my story for now. I hope you find a number of interesting and ear-opening albums to listen to this summer, and please remember to pass along your personal favorites and new discoveries when they appear. A few of the items on this list were recommendations from patrons, so if you hear something great, let everyone else here it, too!

Be well,

Peter Thornell
